Claudine Barbara Palmer

Maria Lantos has a secret. She's a post grad student researching early erotic literature at Yale who puts her studies to work after hours as a courtesan named Claudine specializing in erotic role play. Her allure and stock of sexual tricks command top dollar from international clients. When Maria receives anonymous text messages filled with chilling threats, she knows her secret is out and someone is hunting her—someone who knows a lot about her past and who's intent on playing a starring role in her present.

As Claudine, she loves the brief anonymous liaisons that allow her to explore the darker side of power and desire. But now it's Maria's turn. Two men—charismatic Yale professor Reid Whitman and her business manager, Andrei Barinov—will test the limits of her sexuality and safety, forcing her to discover the depth of the dark places within her ...

A steamy, erotic novel that combines the pace and menace of a thriller, the deep emotional connection of a romance, and the heat and carnality of a beautiful woman's sexual discovery.
